FIRST SEMESTER EXAMINATION 2024/2025 SESSION

Course Title: Communication in English
Course Code: GST 111

GENERAL INSTRUCTION: Do not write your answers on the question paper. Write your answers on your answer booklet. Do not use pencil.

SECTION A: Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions on it.

COMPREHENSION PASSAGE: CLIMATE CHANGE

The impact of climate change on global food systems has become a pressing concern in recent years. Rising temperatures, changing precipitation patterns, and increased frequency of extreme weather events are all affecting agricultural productivity and food security. In particular, the world's poorest countries, which are already struggling to feed their populations, are likely to be disproportionately affected by climate-related disruptions to food systems.

One of the most significant consequences of climate change for food systems is the alteration of growing conditions for crops. Warmer temperatures and changing precipitation patterns can lead to reduced yields, lower quality crops, and shifts in the growing seasons of various crops. For example, in Africa, warmer temperatures are expected to lead to a decline in maize yields, while in Asia, changes in precipitation patterns are likely to affect rice production.

Another critical issue related to climate change and food systems is the impact on water resources. Agriculture is a significant user of water resources, and changes in precipitation patterns and increased evaporation due to warmer temperatures can lead to water scarcity. This can have devastating effects on crop yields and food security, particularly in regions where irrigation is already a challenge.

Furthermore, climate change can also lead to increased food price volatility, as extreme weather events and climate-related disruptions to food systems can lead to shortages and price increases. This can have far-reaching consequences for food security, particularly for the poor and vulnerable populations who spend a large proportion of their income on food.

In addition to these challenges, climate change can also have significant impacts on the nutritional quality of food. For example, warmer temperatures and changing precipitation patterns can lead to reduced levels of essential micronutrients in crops, such as iron, zinc, and vitamin A. This can exacerbate existing micronutrient deficiencies, particularly in regions where access to diverse and nutrient-rich diets is already limited.

Despite these challenges, there are also opportunities for climate-resilient agriculture to contribute to food security and sustainable development. Climate-smart agriculture practices, such as agroforestry, conservation agriculture, and integrated soil fertility management, can help farmers adapt to climate change by improving soil health, reducing erosion, and increasing crop resilience.

Moreover, climate-resilient agriculture can also contribute to reducing greenhouse gas emissions from agriculture, which account for around 14% of global emissions. Practices such as agroforestry and conservation agriculture can help sequester carbon in soils and biomass, while also reducing synthetic fertilizer use and promoting more efficient water use.

In conclusion, the impacts of climate change on global food systems are far-reaching and devastating. However, by adopting climate-resilient agriculture practices and promoting sustainable agriculture development, we can reduce the risks associated with climate change and promote food security, sustainable development, and climate mitigation.

QUESTIONS

1. What is the primary concern related to climate change and global food systems?
 - a) Water scarcity
 - b) Food price volatility
 - c) Impact on agricultural productivity and food security
 - d) Increased greenhouse gas emissions
2. How are warmer temperatures and changing precipitation patterns affecting crop yields?
 - a) Increased yields and improved quality
 - b) Reduced yields and lower quality
 - c) No impact on yields and quality
 - d) Uncertain impact on yields and quality
3. What is the expected impact of climate change on maize yields in Africa?
 - a) Increase in yields
 - b) Decrease in yields
 - c) No impact on yields
 - d) Uncertain impact on yields
4. How can climate change lead to food price volatility?
 - a) Through increased food production
 - b) Through reduced food production and climate-related disruptions
 - c) Through changes in consumer preferences
 - d) Through government policies
5. What is the potential impact of climate change on the nutritional quality of food?
 - a) Improved nutritional quality
 - b) Reduced nutritional quality
 - c) No impact on nutritional quality
 - d) Uncertain impact on nutritional quality
6. What is climate-smart agriculture?
 - a) A type of organic farming
 - b) A set of practices that help farmers adapt to climate change
 - c) A type of precision agriculture
 - d) A type of sustainable agriculture
7. How can agroforestry contribute to climate change mitigation?
 - a) By reducing synthetic fertilizer use
 - b) By promoting more efficient water use
 - c) By sequestering carbon in soils and biomass
 - d) All of the above
8. What percentage of global greenhouse gas emissions come from agriculture?
 - a) 5%
 - b) 10%
 - c) 14%
 - d) 20%
9. How can climate-resilient agriculture contribute to sustainable development?
 - a) By reducing poverty
 - b) By promoting sustainable agriculture practices
 - c) By increasing food security
 - d) All of the above
10. What is the overall conclusion of the passage regarding climate change and global food systems?
 - a) Climate change has no impact on global food systems.
 - b) Climate change has a minimal impact on global food systems

- c) Climate change has devastating impacts on global food systems, but there are opportunities for agriculture to contribute to food security and development
- d) Climate change has deviating impacts on global food impacts, and there is no solution.

DIRECTORATE OF GENERAL STUDIES
FEDERAL UNIVERSITY OF PETROLEUM RESOURCES, EFFURUN
FIRST SEMESTER EXAMINATION 2024/2025 SESSION

Course Title: Communication in English
Course Code: GST 111

GENERAL INSTRUCTION: Do not write your answers on the question paper. Write your answers on your answer booklet. Do not use pencil.

SECTION A: Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions on it.

COMPREHENSION PASSAGE: CLIMATE CHANGE

The impact of climate change on global food systems has become a pressing concern in recent years. Rising temperatures, changing precipitation patterns, and increased frequency of extreme weather events are all affecting agricultural productivity and food security. In particular, the world's poorest countries, which are already struggling to feed their populations, are likely to be disproportionately affected by climate-related disruptions to food systems.

One of the most significant consequences of climate change for food systems is the alteration of growing conditions for crops. Warmer temperatures and changing precipitation patterns can lead to reduced yields, lower quality crops, and shifts in the growing seasons of various crops. For example, in Africa, warmer temperatures are expected to lead to a decline in maize yields, while in Asia, changes in precipitation patterns are likely to affect rice production.

Another critical issue related to climate change and food systems is the impact on water resources. Agriculture is a significant user of water resources, and changes in precipitation patterns and increased evaporation due to warmer temperatures can lead to water scarcity. This can have devastating effects on crop yields and food security, particularly in regions where irrigation is already a challenge.

Furthermore, climate change can also lead to increased food price volatility, as extreme weather events and climate-related disruptions to food systems can lead to shortages and price increases. This can have far-reaching consequences for food security, particularly for the poor and vulnerable populations who spend a large proportion of their income on food.

In addition to these challenges, climate change can also have significant impacts on the nutritional quality of food. For example, warmer temperatures and changing precipitation patterns can lead to reduced levels of essential micronutrients in crops, such as iron, zinc, and vitamin A. This can exacerbate existing micronutrient deficiencies, particularly in regions where access to diverse and nutrient-rich diets is already limited.

Despite these challenges, there are also opportunities for climate-resilient agriculture to contribute to food security and sustainable development. Climate-smart agriculture practices, such as agroforestry, conservation agriculture, and integrated soil fertility management, can help farmers adapt to climate change by improving soil health, reducing erosion, and increasing crop resilience.

Moreover, climate-resilient agriculture can also contribute to reducing greenhouse gas emissions from agriculture, which account for around 14% of global emissions. Practices such as agroforestry and conservation agriculture can help sequester carbon in soils and biomass, while also reducing synthetic fertilizer use and promoting more efficient water use.

In conclusion, the impacts of climate change on global food systems are far-reaching and devastating. However, by adopting climate-resilient agriculture practices and promoting sustainable agriculture development, we can reduce the risks associated with climate change and promote food security, sustainable development, and climate mitigation.

QUESTIONS

1. What is the primary concern related to climate change and global food systems?
 - a) Water scarcity
 - b) Food price volatility
 - c) Impact on agricultural productivity and food security
 - d) Increased greenhouse gas emissions
2. How are warmer temperatures and changing precipitation patterns affecting crop yields?
 - a) Increased yields and improved quality
 - b) Reduced yields and lower quality
 - c) No impact on yields and quality
 - d) Uncertain impact on yields and quality
3. What is the expected impact of climate change on maize yields in Africa?
 - a) Increase in yields
 - b) Decrease in yields
 - c) No impact on yields
 - d) Uncertain impact on yields
4. How can climate change lead to food price volatility?
 - a) Through increased food production
 - b) Through reduced food production and climate-related disruptions
 - c) Through changes in consumer preferences
 - d) Through government policies

6. What is climate-smart agriculture?
 - a) A type of organic farming
 - b) A set of practices that help farmers adapt to climate change
 - c) A type of precision agriculture
 - d) A type of sustainable agriculture
7. How can agroforestry contribute to climate change mitigation?
 - a) By reducing synthetic fertilizer use
 - b) By promoting more efficient water use
 - c) By sequestering carbon in soils and biomass
 - d) All of the above
8. What percentage of global greenhouse gas emissions come from agriculture?
 - a) 5%
 - b) 10%
 - c) 14%
 - d) 20%
9. How can climate-resilient agriculture contribute to sustainable development?
 - a) By reducing poverty
 - b) By promoting sustainable agriculture practices
 - c) By increasing food security
 - d) All of the above
10. What is the overall conclusion of the passage regarding climate change and global food systems?
 - a) Climate change has no impact on global food systems.
 - b) Climate change has a minimal impact on global food systems

- c) Climate change has devastating impacts on global food systems, but there are opportunities for agriculture to contribute to food security and development
- d) Climate change has deviating impacts on global food impacts, and there is no solution.
