ASSIGNMENT ON ANALYSIS OF THE

LECTURERS; DR. MONEY UDIH AND DR.
MRS EKUERHARE SYLVIA EFE

THE DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS

NIGERIAN PEOPLE AND CULTURE

Famous for her huge population of more than 150 million and with more than 370 ethnic groups, Nigeria has the highest population in the African continent. The country is made up of three major ethnic groups namely: the Hausa, the Yorubas and the Igbos. These ethnic groups represent 70 percent (70%) of the population.

Another 10 percent (10%) comprises several other groups, including Kanuri, Tiv and Ibibio. More than 300 smaller ethnic groups account for the remaining 20 percent of the population.

● THE HAUSAS

The Hausa and Fulani people are located mostly in the northern part of Nigeria in cities like Kano, Kaduna, Zaria, Sokoto, Kastina, Jos etc. With a population of over 30 million, they have the largest population in West Africa because of their inter marriages and constant interaction with different people

● THE IGBOS

Igbo land is the home of the Igbo people and it covers most of Southeast Nigeria. This area is divided by the River Niger into two unequal sections- the eastern region (which is the largest) and the Midwestern region. The river, however, has not acted as a barrier to cultural unity; rather it has provided an easy means of communication in an area where many settlements claim different origins.

The Igbo people have historical heritage dated back to the stone age and they are industrious people with vibrant and colourful cultural display

● THE YORUBAS

Yoruba people live mostly in southwest Nigeria. They have developed a variety of different artistic forms including pottery, weaving, bead work, metal work and mask making. Most artworks are made to honour the gods and ancestors and since there are more than 401 known gods to the Yoruba, there are much sculptural and artistic works made.

Due to the vastness in the number of gods, the Yoruba have been compared to the ancient Greeks in the amount of gods and in the similarities between the structures of the gods.

AFRICAN TRADITIONAL RELIGION AND BELIEF SYSTEMS

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS. It is estimated that 50 percent (50%) of Nigerians are Muslims, 40 percent Christian's, and that the remaining 10 percent (10%) practice various religious indigenous religions.

While Muslims can be found in all parts of Nigeria, their strongest footholds are amongst the Hausa and Yoruba. Islam in Nigeria is similar to Islam all over the world. It is based on the teachings of the Prophet Muhammad, which are outlined in the Qur'an.

Christianity is most important in Southern Nigeria. The vast majority of Igbo are Christians, as are many Yorubas. The most popular forms of Christianity in Nigeria include Anglican, Presbyterian, American Southern Baptist and Methodist.

While Islam and Christianity are the dominant religions in Nigeria, neither is completely free of influence from indigenous religions. Most people who consider themselves good Muslims or good Christians often also follow local religious practices. This makes up for perceived shortcomings in their religion. Most indigenous religions are based on a form of ancestor worship in the family members who have passed into the spirit and can influence things in the world of the living. This mixing of traditional ways with Islam has led to groups such as the Bori cult, who use spirit possession as a way to understand why people are suffering in this life. The mixing of traditional ways with Christianity has led to the development of the Aladura church. Aladura priests follow basic Christian doctrine but also use prophecy, healing, and charms to ward off witchcraft.

Many Nigerians follow the teachings of purely indigenous religions. Most of these religions share the idea that one supreme being created the earth and it's people, but has left people to decide their own paths in life. Follower of the traditional Yoruban religion believe that hundreds of spirits or minor gods have taken the place of the supreme god in influencing the daily lives of individuals. Many Yoruban slaves who were taken to the Caribbean and the Americans, brought this religion with them. There it was used as the basis of Santeria and Voodoo.

Because the vast majority of Igbo converted to Christianity during colonialism, few practice the traditional religion, which is based on hundreds of gods, not a single creator.

As mentioned before, the traditional African has the Idea of the one supreme being called different names in Africa depending on the group.

- The Mende of Sierra Leone call him NGEWO meaning (the Great
- Alan of Ghana call Him Onyame (the Supreme Being, God, and the Creator of All Things).
- In Nigeria, the Bini call Him Osanobua (Creator of the World, Sky and Earth and of Life and Death).
- The Igbo call Him Chineke (Creator), Chukwu (Great Spirit).
- The Urhobo call him Oghene (Lord of All, the Creator, Merciful Being).
- The Yoruba call Him Olorun (Owner or Lord of Heaven).
- The Hausa call Him Ubangiji (the Supreme Being, God)

Religious Practitioners. According to Muslim and Christian traditions, officials in these religions tend to be male. For most indigenous religions, priests and priestesses are common.

Traditional priests and priestesses get their power and influence from their ability to be possessed by their god or by their ability to tell the future or to heal. In the Igbo religion men serve as priests to Igbo goddesses, and women serve as priestesses to Igbo gods. While both men and women can rank high in the Yoruban religion, women usually are among the most respected of traditional priests.

Rituals and Holy Places. Because many of the indigenous religions are based on various spirits or minor gods, each with influence over a specific area of nature, many of the traditional rituals are based on paying homage to these gods and spirits. Likewise, the area of control for a spirit also marks the places that are holy to that spirit. For example, a tribe's water spirit may have a specific pond or river designated as its holy place. The Kalabari, Okrika, and Ikwerre tribes of the Niger Delta region all have festivals in honor of water spirits sacred to their peoples. The Yoruba hold a twenty-day Shango festival each year to honor their god of thunder. Many Igbo consider it bad luck to eat yams from the new harvest until after the annual Yam Festival, a harvest celebration held in honor of the Igbo earth goddess Ani.

Death and the Afterlife. Christian and Muslim Nigerians believe that following death, a person's soul is released and judged by God before hopefully going on to Heaven. Many traditional religions, especially those of the eastern tribes, believe in reincarnation. In these tribes, people believe that the dead will come back as a member of his or her mother's or sister's family. Many in-depth ceremonies are necessary to prepare the body before burial. For example, if the person was inflicted with some physical disability, steps would be taken to prevent it from being passed on to him in the next life. An infertile woman may have her abdomen cut open before burial or a blind man may have a salve made from special leaves placed over his eyes.

Regardless of religion, Nigerians bury their dead. This is customary among Christians and Muslims, but it also is based on traditional beliefs that the body should be returned to the earth that sustained it during life.

Muslims are buried so that their heads face the holy city of Mecca in Saudi Arabia. For others, it is customary to bury a man with his head turned toward the east, so he can see the rising sun. A woman is buried facing west, so she will know when the sun sets and when it is time to prepare dinner for her husband in the next life. People also cover the body with black earth during burial because many believe that red earth will result in skin blemishes in the next life.

The ethnic groups in eastern Nigeria believe that the more music and dancing at a funeral, the better that person's chances of a successful afterlife. The size of funerals depends on the social standing of the deceased. Men are expected to set aside money that will be used to ensure they have a properly elaborate funeral. Women, children, and adolescents tend to have much less elaborate funerals.

CONCLUSION: Religion in Africa was the source of all life's activities in the traditional African society. Life was seen with the spiritual eyes. There is no division between life in the religious circle and in the secular realm. This dichotomy is modern. As Idowu points out, morality in traditional African society is basically a fruit of religion and they both rely on each other.

A question that I want to leave with us is: Is African belief as contained in the religious view about life barbaric, old-fashioned or still relevant ?
